GOP drafts impeachment articles

□ Democrats counter with proposal to censure Clinton.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a historic drama played out in the shadow of the Capitol, Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee drew up four articles of impeachment Wednesday against President Clinton. All stem from his sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky and long campaign to cover it up.

Republicans cited Clinton on two counts of perjury, one count of obstruction of justice and one of abuse of power. Each, they said, amounted to "high crimes and misdemeanors," the impeachment standard established by the Founding Fathers in the Constitution more than two centuries ago.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the panel's chairman, vowed to press for a vote by week's end.

In a defiant response, White House spokesman James Kennedy issued a statement saying that "nothing in the record, nothing in the facts, or the law, or the Constitution" warrants impeachment.

White House counsel Charles E. Ruff was still laying out the president's defense, fielding pointed questions from committee Republicans, when GOP aides released the "working draft" of their proposed articles "impeaching William Jefferson Clinton."

Ruff urged legislators to abandon their move toward impeachment, saying Clinton's "conduct, although morally reprehensible, does not warrant impeachment, does not warrant overturning the mandate of the American electorate."

And committee Democrats countered the GOP articles of impeachment with a draft proposal to censure Clinton, citing

just for college students

□ Students wonder if the University gives personal information to marketers.

By IVY CHIN

The BG News

They both received phone calls from the credit card companies; they both have the same question: How do these companies get our names?

Ellen Headington, allied health major, received three phone calls in the same week a month ago from different credit card companies. These credit card companies knew that she is a college student, and have her name, phone number and mailing address.

Christina Kelsh, music graduate student, also faced the same problem in the summer, when she received two phone calls from the same credit card company.

They both have the same suspicion about whether the University releases or sells students' information to companies, in this case, to credit card companies.

"How would they know I'm a college student, unless the University released the information?" Headington said.

According to the student handbook, certain student information can be released. This information can include a student's name, mailing address, phone number and e-mail address.

However, Rebecca McOmber, registrar of the Office of Registration and Records, said that the Office of Registration and Records will not prepare lists of student names and addresses for release off campus.

"It is our policy not to compile a list of students' information available to off-campus requesters even if the data is classified as directory information," McOmber said. "We don't have to prepare a list for them."

From the Handbook...

Educational records or personally identifiable information may be disclosed without the student's written consent but only under the following circumstances:

Records designated by the University as directory information. The University designates the following items as directory information:

Student's name, local address and telephone listing, home address and telephone listing, and E-mail address; parent's or legal guardian's name, address and telephone listing; student's date and place of birth, major field of study, class standing and participation in officially recognized activities and sports; weight and height of members of athletic teams; student's dates of attendance and degrees and awards received; most recent previous educational institution attended by the student; and photographs of the student.

A student may inform the institution that all of the categories of the information should not be designated as directory information with respect to that student, but must do so in writing within a week of the first day of classes for each term. Disclosure of directory information from the education records of an individual who is no longer in attendance may be made without following procedures outlined in this section names and addresses.

McOmber added that companies can access University telephone books, which may be their source for gaining students'

Ann-Marie Lancaster, vice provost of technology and chief information officer, said the soliciting is a common problem. It is the way American businesses communicate, she said.

"It is important for students to understand that we're all tracked by marketing firms," Lancaster said. "Students should be aware of this and have appropriate responses to it."

A friend of Headington who lived in the dorm told her that once she received a call from the credit card company. She told the employee that she was not interested and hung up the phone. Right after that, her roommate received the same call, and the call just went down from room to room.

"They must have a list of the students in order to do that," Headington said.

McOmber said, however, that the Office of Registration and Records is very careful and informed about the laws. It is very important that the University not violate the law because the school is state funded.

"FERPA requirements are taken very seriously and are adhered to strictly," McOmber said.

Per the Federal Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), certain information cannot be released without the prior written consent of the student. Information such as grades, social security numbers and access codes is kept confidential, McOmber.

All student information, other than what is identified by the University as directory information, is considered confidential. This information is safeguarded by all University personnel who are privileged to have access to it, McOmber explained.

However, McOmber said that there is an exception. Under the Solomon Amendment the University is required to make certain information available once per semester to the armed forces for their recruiting purposes. Other than for this purpose, any requests by outside agencies for names or lists of students are denied by the office of Registration and Records.

"Please be aware that students have the right to request that their directory information be withheld," McOmber said.

Students can make a request to the Office of Student Life to flag their records during the first week of the semester when they are still □ Program uses art to encourage dialogue on race and ethnicity issues.

Students express Ethnicity ideas

By MIKE WENDLING
The BG News

The Free Expressions project, headed by director of diversity initiatives Lorna Gonsalves-Pinto, is gathering steam leading up to a display at the Toledo Museum of Art in mid-January.

On Tuesday, Gonsalves-Pinto spoke to interested students in the Honors Center in Kreischer Quadrangle. One of the main goals of the project is to encourage dialogue on race and ethnicity through art.

"The project is designed to allow students the opportunity to express and share their insights regarding race and ethnicity — topics that are often considered taboo in our society," said Gonsalves-Pinto.

More than 100 students have already created artwork in several different media, but Gonsalves-Pinto expects the project to continue through the Museum opening and beyond.

"It is my hope that waves of BGSU students and others will cognate to create Free Expressions," she said. "It would be interesting to chart changes in the free expressions over the years."

The project has given students a chance to use art to depict individual insights into racial and ethnic topics. It is open to all students, even those who are not artistically inclined.

Completed artwork has already been displayed on campus, and Gonsalves-Pinto said that there have been two main types of reactions to the displays.

"When the projects are displayed there are two common reactions: people find the issues expressed disturbing, but they also recognize that most students sincerely want race rela-

Crunch time crowds

□ Computer lab supervisors advise students to take advantage of off-peak hours.

By SARAH DELANEY
The BG News

With finals week only four days away, many University students are cramming into computer labs to work on last-minute projects, papers, and presentations.

The Union computer lab "has seen a big increase in students," according to Andy Tucker, sophomore MIS major and lab attendant.

The Union offers students almost 24-hour access during normal school weeks, so consequently it can't significantly extend hours for the increase in students this week.

According to Tucker, "Between noon and 5 p.m. are our busiest hours," so students who aren't working against a deadline should avoid the labs between these times.

For those students who just wish to check their e-mail, Tucker advises, "Try to be quick about it when you know there's a big line."

There are also many smaller labs on campus that are good places to check e-mail during these busy weeks.

"Not a lot of students know about the smaller labs on campus," says Beth Habegger, junior visual journalism major, citing the residence hall labs as good examples.

Habegger, who also works in the Tech Lab, said, "We've been really busy — especially this week."

To BGSU students:

At this busy time in the academic year, I know that everyone is rushing to finish semester projects, and we are all looking forward to a relaxing holiday season with out families and friends. We are also trying to prepare for next semester.

Before you start leaving campus to enjoy your well-earned break, we want to be sure that each of you has completed your class schedule for the spring semester. Therefore, advisers in the college offices are on special duty this week to help you get one. At this point in the registration period, we are adding extra sections in many high-demand courses and are making room in existing sections of many others.

If you or someone you know hasn't registered yet, or has only a partial schedule with classes that you don't really need, ask a college adviser now. If you have a full schedule with classes that you don't really need, ask a college adviser to help you get in classes that you do need. If you change your mind over the holidays, there will still be time in January to adjust schedules by dropping and adding classes. But if most students have finished registering by the end of the next week, it will be much easier for everyone to relax and enjoy the holidays.

Happy Holidays. I look forward to seeing you back at BGSU in January.

News and business is a dangerous mix.

For-profit companies try to reach the largest market possible. The accepted way of doing this is to pander to the lowest common denominator.

Unfortunately, this attitude has trickled over to news staffs as executives have found that news can turn a profit.

What happens if newspapers and our other news sources go the lowest common denominator route? You'd probably see a lot of articles on how to bake a better, quicker cake. Murder and sex would fill the front pages with the requisite "hard news". And the entertainment section would be packed with glowing reviews of boring, middle-of-the-road music and mediocre movies.

On the local level, I can think of several stories that would not be covered if The News, for some reason, had to turn a profit. While readers might have heard about the "big events" on campus, most of our series wouldn't fit into a business model.

To be fair, most newspapers have a "firewall", a psychological and sometimes even physical separation between news and advertising departments. But the system, like any other, is not perfect.

The nature of television news, where advertising rates and thus revenue depend almost entirely on ratings, is even more susceptible to infiltration by business interests. Perhaps CBS's decision to air an assisted suicide on "60 Minutes" was a sound, newsworthy choice, but airing it during sweeps week immediately casts suspicion on the whole plot.

Even outside of sweeps week, the ratings period on which advertising rates are decided, the business nature of TV news would immediately cause criticism to be fired, even at a relatively respectable show like "60 Minutes."

The lowest common denominator attitude has been institutionalized, even in newsrooms where money doesn't enter into news decisions. When editors focus on "what readers want", they often ignore "what readers need."

This is, perhaps, one of the fundamental questions of journalism. Putting the reader first is a new trend, and one not entirely wrong-headed. Making the reader a god, however, is poor journalism.

Often you will hear newspeople talking about what the reader supposedly wants. However, they rarely talk to actual readers, nor are reader's polls very common. To pretend to know what the reader wants is folly.

Journalists can still make a good guess, however, and plunging ahead, they do stories on murders and fires. It's what the reader wants.

Maybe.

The reader might want murders and fires because they don't know to expect anymore. They might want murders and fires now, but would want in-depth stories about their tax money if they were presented with that option.

News is not only a passive description to a demanding audience. The choices that editors make can also make an impact on what the audience thinks, either about specific issues or about news in general.

On any day of the week, editors and reporters, including those at The News, are faced with a variety of competing interests. There's countless meetings, events, and groups, and they're all screaming for attention.

Journalists must choose. Keeping in mind that the readers may want to read stories that are competing for attention, editors must make decisions which shape the way a community is viewed, and yes, the way a community views itself.

Readers probably want to know about the fire downtown. But they probably also want to know about how their name gets to credit card companies, even though it's not something that immediately confronts them every day. Good newspapers and good journalists give the readers what they want to know — and what they need to know.

HOROSCOPE

Today's Birthday (Dec. 10). You could take the trip of your dreams this year, and also get the promotion you've long been seeking. How? With planning, work and luck. That's how you always get everything you get. You'll have inspiration, too; it should be plentiful in December. Do the paperwork in February, or you won't get any further.

Aries (March 21-April 19)

Today is a 6. You'd better hustle again today, and pay attention, because conditions could change quickly. Something you planned to go one way could veer off in a different direction. If you're on top of the situation, there won't be a problem.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

Today is a 6. You've been having complications concerning money you share with someone else. It could be the household account, your credit cards or even loans or investments. Take heart.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)

Today is a 4. You've probably noticed some confusion in your relationships, and maybe hurt feelings or a misunderstanding. Those will clear up in the next few days. You may not have much time for discussion today anyway.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)

Today is a 6. You're pushing yourself to try something difficult. It looks like you'll be paid well for your efforts, too, which makes the whole process more fun. There's more good news: Mercury is going direct today.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)

Today is a 6. Mercury is going direct today. For you, it's affecting your romance and relationships with children. If you've been noticing disagreements in that area for the last couple weeks, you can blame it on retrograde Mercury.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Today is a 5. Mercury, your ruling planet, has been retrograde for weeks. That's like having your ankles tied together; it's hard to get anywhere quickly. Now, Mercury is going direct. All the planning and hoping and sweating you've been doing lately is going to pay off.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Today is a 6. Somebody's looking over your shoulder, criticizing your every move. Well, try to stifle that comment if you can. You're very good at learning right now, and you can afford to be generous with your attention.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

Today is a 6. Mercury has been retrograde in your second house of money, botching things up. It's been helping you make mistakes in your math, causing you to think you have more than you do, making checks get lost in the mail, etc.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Today is a 5. People have been thinking about you lately because you've been looking so good. The barrier to communication you've been struggling with is starting to dissolve.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Today is a 6. You had some sort of foreboding about a project you're getting into. You weren't quite sure how to go about it, but that's starting to fade. Now you're realizing that it doesn't matter if you have everything planned out exactly.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Today is a 5. If you focus on details today, you can find the money you need. You're not sure just how to go about it. You've tried everything you know about, but this looks like something you didn't know about.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)

Today is a 5. An idea that looks obvious to you could be inconceivable to somebody else. That's hard for you to imagine. You tend to think other people know it all. Well, Pisces is the sign of genius, so the odds are pretty good that they don't, and you do.

Moderates call for Clinton apology

□ How much contrition is enough?

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Could President Clinton escape an impeachment recommendation by the House if he showed more contrition?

That's one of the threads running through the House Judiciary Committee's inquiry. The president's legal team was wrapping up its two-day presentation today.

As both sides sought to sway the 20 to 30 moderate Republicans viewed as swing votes if the impeachment issue reaches the House floor, the president's attitude has become a central element.

"He has acknowledged the wrongdoing. He has himself acknowledged that he was evasive, that he misled people, and that he went out of his way to conceal," White House special counsel Gregory Craig told the committee.

But Republican members continued to express annoyance Clinton hasn't been more contrite and has refused to say he committed perjury. Furthermore, they're unhappy with what they consider his legalistic answers to the 81 questions submitted to him by committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

Democratic Rep. Charles Schumer of New York questioned the validity of a contrition litmus test.

"The American people may wake up next week and find out that the Congress impeached the president for not being contrite enough to certain members of Congress," said Schumer, who moves to the Senate next month. He wasn't addressing panel members — whose minds, on both sides, appear made up — as much as those undecided GOP moderates.

Some of those moderates have suggested they might be more inclined to side with Clinton if he were more forthcoming, and less lawyerly, over the next few days.

The apology route is one Clinton has taken before.

On Sept. 11, Clinton told religious leaders: "I have sinned. ... I have repented." His eyes were moist and his voice choking as he addressed the annual National Prayer Breakfast.

Those apologies followed adverse reaction to his combative August speech in which he admitted misleading the nation and his family about his relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

But then came Democratic gains in November's midterm elections, and polls suggesting public dissatisfaction with the Republican handling of the impeachment inquiry.

Republican Judiciary Committee members expressed dismay Tuesday that Clinton's team continued to refuse to say that Clinton lied under oath — or to summon witnesses with direct knowledge of the case.

"He doesn't believe that he lied," insisted Craig, the White House counsel.

"You're taking back all of his apologies, aren't you," asserted Rep. Bob Inglis, R-S.C.

Even so, the administration was taking a less confrontational stance than it had late last month, when Clinton's personal attorney, David Kendall, squared off against Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

As recently as Monday, White House spokesman Joe Lockhart told reporters, "The contrition is real and is there."

On Tuesday, the White House presented as witnesses a series of academics and legal experts and former House members who testified on the differences with Watergate 25 years ago.

Schumer asked them their views on the relevance of contrition — or lack thereof.

"There is no constitutional standard for lack of contrition," said Sean Wilentz, a Princeton University history professor.

Bruce Ackerman, a Yale Law School professor, said: "The operational question is whether the conduct alleged represents a clear and present danger to the foundations of the republic. And contrition, it seems to me, does not enter into that."

Wayne Owens, a former Democratic congressman from Utah who sat on the 1974 House Judiciary Committee, even suggested President Nixon might have saved his presidency if he had apologized, at least in the early going. "The public then did not want to impeach even that unpopular a president," Owens said.

INVESTIGATION

Remains believed to be missing woman

SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Police have tentatively identified human remains found last month in a field.

Sandusky police Lt. Charlie Sams said authorities believe the body is that of Linda Robertson, a Sandusky resident who was reported missing in 1993.

Authorities made a tentative identification based on jewelry and clothing found at the site. DNA testing is being performed to come up with a positive identification.

Investigators also said that Ms. Robertson was murdered and they have a suspect.

Ms. Robertson, 45, was last seen near her home in March 1993. She was reported missing a day later.

TRANSPLANT

Insurance company agrees to pay for bone marrow transplant

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Tim Angle said he had just about given up when he received a call from his insurance company saying it would pay for his bone marrow transplant after all.

After three rejections, Cleveland's Medical Mutual of Ohio notified Angle, 59, on Tuesday that it decided to cover the procedure after a three-doctor panel reviewed the case.

Earlier, the company had said the procedure was experimental and not covered by Angle's policy.

Angle needs the transplant to fight non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, a type of cancer. Angle has suffered from the disease for six years and doesn't have the $200,000 he said the operation would cost.

"I never thought it would happen," Angle said Tuesday after receiving a call from Ben Zilman, vice president of Medical Mutual, which administers the health insurance program for the Public Employees Retirement System of Ohio.

Angle, a retired street department worker, first must undergo chemotherapy and radiation treatments to kill his cancerous bone marrow before he can receive a transfusion of bone marrow stem cells being donated by a brother.

In theory, the stem cells would migrate to his bone and grow and replace the bone marrow. The new marrow would produce cancer-free white blood cells.

tions to improve," she said.

Ella Greene, sophomore art therapy major, is an artist who has already worked on projects of the Free Expressions type.

"It's really exciting, using art to communicate about important issues such as these," she said.

Tuesday night, Gonsalves-Pinto noted the changing idea of race.

"Years ago, many of you here would be considered non-white, even if you're of eastern or southern European descent," she said, as students detailed their ethnic backgrounds. "Race is an idea that is still forming."

In a rapidly-changing nation, issues of race and ethnicity are taking on an ever-greater importance.

"Our survival depends on how we well we can come together and talk about these issues," she said.

After students talked about their own ethnic backgrounds, they were shown and given a chance to respond to already-completed free expressions art.

Laura Giesige, a freshman interior design major who attended Tuesday's presentation, said she is trying to incorporate her thoughts about racial and ethnic issues into her life.

"I come from a homogenous area where things like this are not often discussed," she said.

Gonsalves-Pinto noted that even the basic language for speaking about such issues is missing.

"I have found that many students, particularly European-American students, have a difficult time articulating how they feel about racial issues," said Gonsalves-Pinto.

Despite student participation and the Museum opening in January, the project has not been entirely free of opposition.

"Dealing with resistance is part and parcel of the project. The revealing nature of the exhibit lies in strong contrast to the pervasive silence that surrounds issues of race and racism in our society," said Gonsalves-Pinto. "People who view this exhibit speak of how it's provocative, disturbing and also informative."

"When I first discussed this project several people were skeptical," she said. "Many students were uncomfortable as they attempted to identify and express their insights regarding race. Once the displays were set up, students recognized the power of the displays."

The Free Expressions exhibit will run from Jan. 15 to Feb. 14 at the Toledo Museum of Art. Gonsalves-Pinto hopes it will become a traveling display which will continue to grow long into the future.

SELLING

enrolled in classes, so that no information is released by the University, McOmber explained.

She said this will withhold information from everyone and for almost every purpose. However, she advised that students should use the requests cautiously, because information cannot be given to anyone, including potential employers, after the request is made.

Headington said that if the University released the students' information, she would be very upset.

"The University is very concerned about privacy issues," Headington said. "For instance, we need the access code in order to access our grade. But if they release our phone number and addresses, I'm worried about the security of our personal information such as our student ID and social security number."

Headington also worried that some students may get the wrong idea from the persuasion of the credit card company employees because some companies encourage students to sign up and earn so-called credit rating.

Kelsh agrees that students should have the right to privacy. Headington said she should also have the right not to be bothered by solicitation calls from the credit card companies.

Lancaster also noted that to deal with solicitors, many households have caller ID and answering machines, so that they are not bothered by telemarketing calls.

"It's okay credit card companies called," Lancaster said. "Students can just tell the telemarketers they are not interested. They're not obligated to stay on the line."

Lancaster gave as examples that when someone purchases books from the bookstore, fills out information on the Internet and many other kinds of activities, people will be tracked when they are performing these activities. Some of our information is not private. Thus, people get soliciting calls and mail from the marketing companies.

"Marketing companies collect people's information through their actions," Lancaster said. "That's the way it is. It is part of our society."

The Tech Lab is the largest lab on campus, with 40 Macs and 44 PC's. Like the Union lab, the Tech Lab is open nearly 24 hours a day, closing for only two hours between 5 and 7 a.m. on Tuesdays for maintenance.

Habegger said, "We have regulars that come at night, but the lab is never at capacity during those hours."

In addition to the Union and Tech labs, the Business Administration Lab is also open 24 hours. According to Patty Douglas,

Computer Operations Supervisor for Information and Technologies Services, "The labs are not shut down during school breaks."

The newer labs on campus also offer more programs than some of the older labs, according to Douglas.

"Most students have access to equipment they can type a paper on, so we try to provide more specialized programs," she said.

In Hayes Hall, there is a lab specialized for faculty, staff, and graduate students (FSG Lab). Deb Wells, Customer Relations Manager for Information and Technology Services, said, "This lab is busy all semester. But our peak hours are definitely in the late afternoon and early evening."

The FSG Lab is open from 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. daily in addition to weekends and during school breaks.

Anthony Jones, sophomore business major, doesn't like the idea of a lab specifically for graduate students.

"Having some labs just for grads makes us [undergraduates] stuck," he said. Graduate students have equal access to all of the other labs on campus in addition to the FSG Lab.

Jones also dislikes the Macintosh computers and said, "They are not a wise choice for our labs because they aren't used in jobs and in other organizations."

Sophomore criminal justice major Julie Neidert was more positive about the computer labs on campus.

"I think there are enough labs, but they all need to be 24 hours, especially during finals week."

Kevorkian goes to court for murder

□ Kevorkian ordered to stand trial on murder charge.

The Associated Press

WATERFORD, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian was ordered Wednesday to stand trial on murder charges based largely on a video he supplied to "60 Minutes" that appears to show him giving a terminally ill man a lethal injection.

"The intent to kill was premeditated and thought out beforehand," District Judge Phyllis McMillen ruled after a preliminary hearing on the charges. She also ordered Kevorkian to stand trial on charges of assisted suicide and delivering a controlled substance.

No trial date was set.

It will be the first time Kevorkian actually stands trial on murder charges. He has twice been charged with murder, but those charges were thrown out. He has been acquitted in three assisted suicide trials involving five deaths.

Kevorkian, 70, had dared prosecutors to charge him after he produced the video of Thomas Youk, a 52-year-old man who suffered from Lou Gehrig's disease.

The first-degree murder charge carries a mandatory life sentence. The assisted suicide charge is punishable by up to five years, the controlled substance charge by up to seven.

Kevorkian has acknowledged taking part in some 130 assisted suicides since 1990, but said

Youk's death was his first euthanasia, in which he directly administered the lethal agent. In previous cases, he said, he had an apparatus that let the patient start the flow of drugs or gas.

He told reporters after Wednesday's ruling that what he did for Youk was not a crime "no matter what the words say on paper."

"Do you think I'm a criminal? If yes, you're happy. If no, what am I doing here?" he said.

At the hearing, the judge was shown both the complete videotape and the edited form that was seen by more than 15 million households watching CBS' "60 Minutes."

"I think the main evidence is the one he provided to the whole country," prosecutor John Skrzynski said.

Defense attorney David Gorosh argued that Kevorkian should not be tried on both murder and assisted suicide charges.

"It's a legal impossibility, it's a medical impossibility that Thomas Youk could have killed himself and also be killed," Gorosh said.

The judge, however, said that according to the tape, Kevorkian originally discussed assisted suicide with Youk.

Kevorkian is believed to have injected Youk with a fatal dose of potassium chloride at Youk's Waterford Township home on Sept. 17, three weeks after Michigan's latest assisted suicide law went into effect.

His face does not appear on the video, which shows Youk sitting while a figure injects him with drugs to put him to sleep and stop his heart.

System makes airport competitive

□ New equipment will help expand Cleveland's Burke Lakefront Airport.

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A new guidance system for landing planes at Burke Lakefront Airport will help the downtown facility expand and will ease air traffic congestion over Cleveland, city officials said Wednesday.

Mayor Michael R. White held a news conference to announce the installation of an instrument landing system at Burke.

The instrument landing system lets pilots know if their planes are lined up with the runway and at the right altitude as they descend into the airport. Previously, the airport did not have a device that gave pilots guidance about altitude.

The fact that Burke has not had an ILS has deterred some corporations from flying into it, said Michael Barth, the airport's commissioner.

The airport sits next to Lake Erie less than a mile from the heart of the city's downtown business district. It caters to corporate and charter flights and handled more than 82,000 flights last year.

With an ILS installed, Burke will become a more reliable airport in bad weather and will likely be open more days in the spring and autumn when visibility is poor, Barth said.

Clouds could be no lower than 577 feet for a plane to land at Burke before the ILS. But with the system, the minimum cloud ceiling has been reduced to 273 feet.

"This ILS makes this airport more competitive," White said.

The city expects the number of flights at Burke to increase to 120,000 a year by 2015.

The mayor said his administration will begin a marketing campaign to attract more companies to fly to Burke. "If you're looking for an airport that you can land in, get in a cab, and be at your meeting in 10 minutes, the place to come is Burke," he said.

Barth said some of that effort will be targeted at corporations now flying into Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, the city's commercial airport.

Persuading business flights and charters to move to Burke will ease congestion and create more room for new commercial business at Hopkins, which is in the midst of a $600 million expansion.

A new concourse is scheduled to open next year at Hopkins, which handled 309,000 flights last year, and a new parking garage will be completed.

Barth said small commercial jets also would be able to use Burke, but there are no plans to use the airport for commercial flights.

CLINTON

him for "reprehensible conduct with a subordinate," Ms. Lewinsky, and demanding his signature on the instrument of his censure.

"No person is above the law and the president remains subject to criminal and civil penalties for this conduct," the Democratic proposal says. It does not accuse Clinton of perjury, nor does it demand he pay a fine for his transgressions.

Committee approval of any of the four articles of impeachment would set the stage for a vote in the House next week, thus making Clinton only the second president in American history to suffer the humiliation of an impeachment roll call on the floor of Congress.

President Andrew Johnson was impeached in the House, then acquitted in a Senate trial by a single vote in 1868. A third president, Richard Nixon, resigned in 1974 rather than face certain impeachment in the House during Watergate.

Unlike Nixon, though, Clinton retains high approval ratings in the polls and strong support among lawmakers of his own party — potent weapons for the battle ahead.

Increasingly, he and his aides were bidding for the support of 30 or so moderate Republicans who will hold the balance of power in the House. One GOP lawmaker, Rep. Amo Houghton of New York, declared his opposition to impeachment during the day, and the White House signaled a willingness to consider any and all proposals that don't include impeachment.

Short of impeachment, "we are open to any reasonable suggestion from any side as a way of finding an end to this," Ruff told the Judiciary Committee in one of several officially sanctioned comments inviting a lesser punishment.

One Democrat, Rep. Martin Meehan of Massachusetts, called on Clinton to make a fresh apology in a nationally televised appearance.

The first GOP draft article says Clinton "willfully provided perjurious, false and misleading testimony" to Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's grand jury last summer when it was investigating his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

The second says Clinton "willfully provided perjurious, false and misleading testimony" in a deposition under oath before a federal judge in the Paula Jones lawsuit, and in a sworn written affidavit.

The third alleges Clinton obstructed justice on a variety of particulars. These include allegedly encouraging Ms. Lewinsky to submit a false affidavit; encouraging her to testify falsely in court; participating in a plan to hide gifts Ms. Lewinsky had given him, and several other alleged actions.

The fourth alleges Clinton "frivolously and corruptly" asserted executive privilege in battling Starr's investigation; made false and misleading statements to members of his Cabinet and aides, to the public, and to Congress in submitting answers to 81 questions posed by Hyde last month.

Within an hour, committee Democrats issued a lengthy rebuttal arguing there was "no basis for an impeachment."

Committee approval of at least one count seems assured — the one dealing with allegations of perjury before Starr's grand jury. There appeared to be at least one or two dissenters among committee Republicans to the articles alleging abuse of power and perjury in the Jones case.

A House vote would occur next week, and officials on both sides of the issue were focusing their energy on the expected showdown there.

Hyde urged wavering Republican lawmakers to "keep their powder dry" until they have all the facts in the case against the president.

Michigan upends women's hoops

Michigan

overpowered Bowling Green with defense and a former Falcon at Anderson Arena.

By DAVE TRUMAN

The BG News

After two free throws and a Jacki Raterman jump shot, Bowling Green trailed Michigan by six points 58 seconds into the second half.

It was the closest the Falcons had been since the 6:23 mark of the first half when UM led 27-21.

Wolverines coach Sue Guevara called a 20-second time-out to rally her team and UM freshman guard Alayne Ingram responded. Ingram buried three shots and teammate Anne Thorius added a 3-pointer to bolster the dwindling lead with a 9-0 run.

UM (7-1) went on to hand BG (4-4) an 82-71 defeat and tie a school record with its seventh straight win.

"There is no secret to what our strength is," Guevara said. "We like to run the ball. At that point we were able to get some lay-ups and we got a couple of open jumpers and I thought we did a pretty good job of rebounding the basketball."

Over two and a half minutes after the timeout, BG's Francine Miller hit a shot that would end the drought, but the Falcons would never come closer than eight again.

"Defense, that was the story of it," BG coach Deanne Knoblauch said. "If you're going to have a hope of upsetting a team like Michigan, you have to play with a lot more intensity defensively. We just didn't have that intensity that we needed tonight."

The Wolverines dominated the boards in the first half (see related story) and worked on the Falcon defense with an impressive inside-outside combination that included former BG player Alison Miller.

"I didn't know how Alison was going to react coming back to Bowling Green, having played here, but I thought she had a pretty good game," Guevara said. "I'm sure she is glad the game is over with. She had a career-high tonight. She had 12 points and six rebounds."

Miller scored ten points and grabbed 5 boards in the first half while forward Stacey Thomas duplicated those numbers with more jump shots and fewer put-backs.

Miller played in 15 games for the Falcons in the 1996-97 season when she was a freshman. In her first season playing for the Maize and Blue, she is averaging 6.4 points and 5.3 rebounds and has started 5 games. The 6-2 sophomore forward/center averaged 3.1 points at Bowling Green.

"A lot is the same," Miller said of coming back to BG. "I saw my same teammates and talked to them before the game - caught up with them a little bit. I'm glad I'm at Michigan though."

Raterman led all scorers with a season high 25 points on 11 of 17 shooting. Sherry Kahle and Miller added 16 and 12 respectively for the Falcons.

Wolverines use offensive rebounds in non-conference win

Michigan went to the boards in the first half against Bowling Green last night.

By MATT STEINER

The BG News

Some would say that opportunity only rings once. Wednesday at Anderson Arena opportunity kept coming around for Michigan by way of the offensive rebound.

The BG women's basketball team was plagued by the Wolverines' second chances, leading to an 82-71 loss.

In the first half, the Falcons had an especially tough time guarding the defensive boards.

"The times that we made them (Michigan) miss, we didn't stick a box out," BG coach Deanne Knoblauch said. "In the first half we were down ten points and they had ten offensive rebounds. I don't remember them missing a put back."

Of the Wolverines' 40 first-half points, 10 of them came off second chances following offensive rebounds. This proved to be the difference at half-time. BG found themselves down 40-30 at intermission.

BG Women's Basketball Coach

Former Falcon Allison Miller led the way on the offensive boards for the Wolverines before the intermission. Six of Miller's 10 first-half points resulted from her aggressive rebounding.

"We did a pretty good job as far as rebounding the basketball," Wolverine coach Sue Guevara said. "Rebounding is the key to any game. We go hard on offense and we go hard on defense. When your first shots aren't going in you have got to go get it."

For the game the Falcons ended up with 36 total rebounds. They pulled down 26 defensively and 10 on the offensive end. Senior center Jacki Raterman led the way with eight.

Michigan tallied 43 boards on the night. Sixteen came off their own misses, while they grabbed 27 on defense. Miller ended the game with only six rebounds, slowing down in the second half. Junior Stacey Thomas pulled down the most for the Wolverines with 12.

The Falcons improved their rebounding in the second half. The teams matched boards after the intermission with 20 each. BG and Michigan each had six offensive rebounds in the final twenty minutes.

Despite the improvement, the damage was already done.

Ohio State hockey charges up ladder

Ohio State claws its way back to the top of the CCHA.

By William R. Sanderson

The BG News

After a rough start to the season, the Ohio State Buckeyes appear to have fully recovered.

With a pair of weekend wins, the Buckeyes have climbed into a tie with Ferris State for second place in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. Their record is 8-7-2 overall, but a much better 8-4-2 in league play.

This weekend's victims were the Notre Dame Fighting Irish, who were in first place only weeks ago. In their farewell to the OSU Ice Rink, the Buckeyes edged out UND 4-3 Friday and then beat them 4-1 Saturday.

The Irish were ranked sixth in the nation going into the weekend.

The Buckeyes were led by junior forward Hugo Boisvert and sophomore goalie Jeff Maud.

Boisvert had a five point weekend, including a goal and two assists Friday night.

Maud was awarded the CCHA Defensive "Player of the Week" after allowing Notre Dame only two even-strength goals on the weekend. He also made a total of 57 saves and stopped UND's Brian Urlick on a penalty shot.

Defenseman Jason Crain received the CCHA's "Rookie of the Week." He had a goal and two assists against the Irish and a +2 plus/minus rating.

Smith keeps up scoring pace

The top of the CCHA scoring race is dominated by players from Northern Michigan and Notre Dame.

The Wildcats' Buddy Smith leads the overall list with five goals and 21 assists.

Notre Dame's Ben Simon and Brian Urlick take the second and third spots with 25 and 24 points respectively.

Smith's linemate, J.P. Vigier is fourth with 21 points.

All four of them are tied in league scoring with 20 points.

The upcoming weekend

This weekend features a number of non-conference games for the CCHA.

The second-place Ferris State Bulldogs head east for game at St. Lawrence and Clarkson.

A pair of Western Collegiate Hockey Association teams make visits. St. Cloud State will play a pair in Oxford, Ohio against Miami. Michigan Tech will play Lake Superior Friday and Saturday.

Northern Michigan heads south to play Michigan on Friday and Michigan State on Saturday.

Western Michigan visits Bowling Green for a game Saturday.

Detroit obtains pitcher

Kida brings pride, humility, humor from Japan.

The Associated Press

DETROIT — If his fastball is as quick as his wit, Japanese right-hander Masao Kida may prove to be a real find for the Detroit Tigers.

Dressed in the formal kimono of the samurai, Kida wowed reporters with a great sense of humor during his introductory news conference Wednesday with the Tigers.

Kida, 30, who has a 96-mph fastball, signed a two-year contract worth $3 million during the news conference. After that, it was time to get acquainted.

Speaking through an interpreter, Kida told the reporters — about three-quarters of them from the Japanese media — what he had been doing since arriving in Detroit two days earlier. Clearly, he was up on his

Boxing legend dies

SAN DIEGO — Archie Moore, the light heavyweight champion who set the record for knockouts during his 27-year career and the only boxer to fight Marciano and Ali, died Wednesday at 84.

Moore had undergone heart surgery a few years ago and his health had deteriorated in the past two weeks, his son, Billy, said. Moore was taken to a San Diego hospice last week and several of his eight children had kept vigil at his bedside.

"My dad lived a good life and we're not sad," Billy Moore said. "We know he's gone home to be with the Lord and we rejoice in that."

Moore retired at 49 in 1963 after a career considered one of the most amazing examples of longevity in sports.

Bengals fine Johnson after releasing him

Punter's departure leaves teammates at a loss for words.

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Lee Johnson's release and fine for questioning the Cincinnati Bengals' front office has left coach Bruce Coslet in an awkward position and prompted players to watch what they say.

Coslet declined on Wednesday to talk about the decision to fine Johnson one game's pay — $20,588.24 — for conduct detrimental to the team. Johnson was informed of the fine by mail a day after general manager Mike Brown released him.

The front office's move left Coslet and his players watching their words on Wednesday.

When asked about the fine and whether he considered Johnson's comments to be detrimental to the team, Coslet asked reporters to avoid the subject with him.

"No, I, I don't talk about fines. I never have and I never will," Coslet said. "No, I understand you have to pursue the story, but you have to understand the predicament I'm in. So I'm not going to comment on it anymore."

Players also were reluctant to talk about how the team dealt with Johnson, who was the franchise's last link to its 1988 Super Bowl team.

"I plead the Fifth (Amendment)," quarterback Jeff Blake said.

Brown was out of town at an NFL meeting and wasn't available for comment on Wednesday.

Johnson got in trouble with Brown by suggesting after a 33-

20 loss to Buffalo on Sunday that the front office should consider doing things differently. The Bengals haven't had a winning record since Brown took control of the team before the 1991 season.

Brown read his comments in the newspapers the next morning, and Johnson was pulled out of a special teams meeting and told of his release by the team's personnel director.

Brown said the release had nothing to do with Johnson's comments. He said the team wanted to see if practice squad punter Brad Costello can be counted upon for next season.

But Brown conceded that he was surprised by Johnson's comments. Brown said he figured that the punter was "baited" into them and shrugged them off as something said out of frustration.

American culture.

"The first night, I went out for Japanese food," Kida said. "But I was disappointed I couldn't meet Robo Cop."

Tigers general manager Randy Smith, who made a 25-hour round-trip flight to Japan to woo him just before Thanksgiving, was full of praise for Kida. Smith said he was most impressed with Kida's poise and intelligence.

Kida, a 6-foot-3, 210-pounder who played last season for the Orix Blue Wave of the Japanese Pacific League, compiled a 54-64 record with a 3.81 ERA in 10 seasons in the Japanese leagues — all but one with the Yomiuri Giants of the Central League.

Last season, Kida began as a starter but was switched to the bullpen on Aug. 7. After that, he was one of the league's most effective relievers, earning 16 saves — third-most in the league — with a 1.38 ERA and a 1-1 record in 22 games.

Including his starts, Kida was 4-7 with a 4.72 ERA overall last season.

Because the Tigers already have Todd Jones and Doug Brocail in the bullpen, they will probably give Kida a chance to make the rotation in spring training.

"The one thing that impressed me was that he has experience both as a starter and as a reliever," Smith said. "Plus, his size, and the fact that he has three good pitches he can throw for strikes. All of those are pluses."

Kida's signing highlights the trend of major league teams turning to Japan to find new talent.

Japanese pitchers now in the majors include Hideki Irabu of the New York Yankees, Hideo Nomo and Masato Yoshii of the New York Mets and Shigetoshi Hasegawa of the Anaheim Angels. Kida said he was grateful to those players for blazing the trail to America.

Still, this will be the longest

Kida has ever been away from Japan. Isn't he concerned that he might get homesick?

"Well, I think I can get rid of that worry, if I can find a nice girlfriend over here," Kida said with a smile. "Please make it known that I am single."

Smith still hopes to sign a catcher — perhaps Bill Haselman who hit .314 in 40 games for Texas last season.
